MESSAGE ARTICLE – January 2022*Rabbi Shae J. Kane D.D.

I wanted to share with you these eloquent and articulate reflections of Dr. Shuly Rubin Schwartz, the first woman and newly selected Chancellor of the Jewish Theological Seminary, on her recent visit to The White House for the Hanukkah celebration. I know Shuly personally, as she and her late husband Rabbi Gershon Schwartz Z”L, lived in the neighboring town when we lived on Long Island 25 years ago.

“How fortunate American Jews have been in the United States. This country has offered Jews a sense of at-homeness unprecedented in Jewish history. Having been granted citizenship as a matter of course along with other Americans, our ancestors had the confidence to plant new roots in this country and were able to flourish as both Americans and as Jews. By establishing a secular state that was friendly to religion, the founders made it possible for Jews to contribute to society without hiding or renouncing their Jewishness.

So, when an invitation to the White House Hanukkah party popped up in my inbox, I was filled with emotion. Honored to be invited, I hastily replied that I would attend. But I confess that something continued to gnaw at me as the day drew near, for I grew up in an era when separation of church and state was understood to be a necessary safeguard of the liberty that Jews have enjoyed. My rabbi father would rail against nativity scenes in the public square, and the addition of a hanukkiyah, or m’norah, far from assuaging his concerns, only exacerbated them.

For my father and so many Jews in mid-century America, Madison’s view that ‘religion and government will both exist in greater purity the less they are mixed together’ resonated. But what did it feel like to participate in a Hanukkah candle-lighting ceremony and reception in the People’s House in 2021, after decades in which the lines separating church and state have been blurred considerably, a development many Americans—Jews included—heartily endorse?

Entering the White House, I expected to feel unsettled. Yet as I crossed the threshold, I thought about the all-important distinction between a government seeking a religious endorsement, or privileging one religion, and a government that extends respect and gratitude to all religious groups that make up the fabric of our society and especially its generous and humane aspects. This event surely reflected the latter. Passing through the White House corridors, we were greeted by live music and staff who offered a hearty ‘Welcome to the White House.’ I realized that was precisely how I felt: welcome. And as I entered the room where we would light the candles—despite the presence of six Christmas trees and four wreaths amidst a portrait of George Washington, I experienced a mixture of joy, pride, and immense gratitude.

Perhaps the relationship between church and state has always been more complicated than meets the eye. As Will Herberg, social philosopher and sociologist of religion best known for his book Protestant, Catholic, Jew reminded us almost 70 years ago (just as my father’s rabbinate was beginning): ‘neither in the minds of the Founding Fathers nor in the thinking of the American people ... did the ‘separation of church and state’ imply unconcern with, much less hostility to, religion on the part of the government.’

When I stood among other Jews celebrating Hanukkah with our Catholic president in what is still a culturally Protestant country, I saw the truth in Herberg’s assertion. I also identified deeply with our early American Jewish forebears, for even in 1788, just a few weeks after the Constitution was ratified, Jews participated in public events to celebrate the moment. The largest of these celebrations took place on July 4th in Philadelphia—then the capitol of the country. Blacksmiths walked behind a large bellows that symbolized the passion to keep alive the flame of liberty. Ministers marched arm in arm. And though there were no rabbis in the country yet, a hazzan filled this role.

Naphtali Phillips, a child at the time, later described the event in a letter, making special mention of the food served to the marchers at the end of the parade: ‘There was a number of long tables loaded with all kinds of provisions, with a separate table for the Jews who [for religious reasons] could not partake of the meat from the other tables; but they had a full supply of soured [pickled] salmon, bread and crackers, almonds, raisins etc. This table was under the charge of an old cobbler named Isaac Moses.’

The symbolism here is astounding. Less than a month after the ratification of the Constitution and three years before the adoption of the Bill of Rights, which guaranteed freedom of religion, Jews already felt and exercised that right. They participated fully as American Jews—their hazzan arm in arm with Christian ministers and the presence of supervised kosher food ensuring that they too could enjoy the celebration. They simultaneously stood both as part of and distinct from the heart of American life. Phillips detailed the sumptuousness of the ‘kiddush’ not the strangeness of it.

Then as now, the strength of our country derives from the diversity of religious voices—majority as well as minority ones. This diversity for Jews is now embodied in the person of Doug Emhoff, for this candle lighting marked the first time Hanukkah was celebrated by a Jewish member of the Second Family, the Second Gentleman. The Liberty Bell m’norah that was kindled reinforced this sentiment, for it was designed by Manfred Anson (1922-2012), a Holocaust survivor, in honor of Philadelphia’s Liberty Bell. In Herberg’s words: ‘America is predominantly a land of minorities; that is its uniqueness, its strength, but to a degree also its weakness. Some way must be found in which these minorities within the national community may each freely pursue its own particular concerns without impairing the over-all unity of American life.’

Hearing President Biden, Vice President Harris, and their spouses share powerful Hanukkah - inspired messages of hope, steadfastness, and survival; reciting blessings over the Hanukkah candles and singing ‘Maoz Tzur,’ listening to the stirring words of JTS alumna Rabbi Lauren Holtzblatt, I felt the privilege of living fully as both an American and a Jew, of embracing both my Jewish distinctiveness and my unity with all Americans.” (Italics mine)

President's Message

January 2022

January 1st starts a new month and a new year, promising the hope of a better year than the one that just ended. As the pandemic rages on, and our daily routines continue to be hampered by the necessary precautions we have to take to stay safe from the scourge of the covid-19 virus, we try to find a shining light at the end of this dark tunnel. While January may be cold and our days may be short, January is also a time to mark the beginning of a spring soon to arrive. One of the ways we do this is to celebrate Tu B'Shvat. We plant trees and we give thanks for the many fruits that those trees provide us. Trees clean the air we breathe and provide us with oxygen. We also plant trees to celebrate a life cycle event, to honor someone or in memory of a loved one. In Judaism, the tree is a powerful symbol of life itself.

Tu B'Shvat or the "New Year of the Trees" is Jewish Arbor Day. The holiday is observed on the 15th (tu) of the Hebrew month of Shvat. Scholars believe that originally Tu B'Shvat was an agricultural festival, marking the emergence of spring. In the 17th century, Kabbalists created a ritual for Tu B'Shvat that is similar to a Passover seder. Today, many Jews hold a modern version of the Tu B'Shvat seder each year. The holiday also has become a tree-planting festival in Israel, in which Israelis and Jews around the world plant trees in honor or in memory of loved ones and friends.

So this January, I encourage everyone to join us for the Tu B'Shvat seder on January 14, and take a moment to appreciate all that trees mean to our survival. If you want to plant a tree in Israel to celebrate a life cycle event, or to honor someone or in someone's memory, you can do so through the Jewish National Fund by going on their website, www.jnf.org.

As Dr. Seuss's title character, the Lorax, would say, "speak for the trees."

Best wishes for the new year ahead!

Rachel

The Latest from Sisterhood
January 2022

The weather may be getting colder, but Sisterhood has activities on Zoom coming up. You can stay warm in your own house, and still have a good time.

The Annual Vodka and Latka on Saturday night, December 11th, which Sisterhood always does with Social Club, was well attended. All who came to the event had a wonderful time. There was eating, drinking and dancing. Thank you to our bartenders Stephen Cohen, Mario Gottesmann, and Sheldon Levine. Also, thank you to the committee led by Ellen Green for an outstanding evening.

Sisterhood had a Virtual Pre-New Year's secular celebration on Monday night December 27th. Thank you Ilene Marcus and Barbara Stein for chairing this event, and having activities that were put together to make the evening fun and enjoyable.

Thank you Judy Posniack and her committee, Fran Leibowitz, Arlene Kane and Babs Dobbs for continuing the Sisterhood's Tree of Life for the 2022 year. Honor your family members with a leaf. The cost is $10 a name. Checks are made out to Sisterhood of MJC and send to Teresa Gottesmann.

Thank you, Ellen Green, for chairing the purchase of Mah Jongg cards for the year 2022.

On Monday, January 17, 2022 we will have a Board meeting followed by a Virtual Movie Discussion led by Rachel Streich, the chair of the event. The movie is: "Bombshell: The Hedy Lamarr Story". The talk about the movie should be very interesting.

Sisterhood's February 28th Board meeting will be followed by a Video Presentation by Randi Herman on Making Hamentashen. Ilene Marcus will be chairing this event.

Sunday, March 6th is Sisterhood's Annual Torah Fund Brunch. The chair of the event is Marlene Podell. The Topic is: Synagogues and Communities of the United States with Oscar Israelowitz. Oscar is an excellent presenter, and it should be a very enjoyable and informative morning.

The Meeting on March 21st will be followed by a Health Program with Psychologist Yoni Sabin. This evening will be informative and helpful. Rachel is chairing this event.

MJC SOCIAL CLUB HAPPENINGS

January 2022

We had Saturday morning services in the main sanctuary on December 18th. Everything went very smoothly. It was nice to see everyone in person. Even Cantor Rimer was there. He performed beautifully as our cantor emeritus. It was great to see and hear him. Zoom was also available.

Our monthly mini raffle is still ongoing. For only $10, you have a chance to win $200. Please send in your entry forms as soon as possible. Checks are now being accepted for $120 for an entire year of raffles. Both our November winner and the December donor want to remain anonymous.

Vodka and Latka in conjunction with Sisterhood took place on Saturday evening, December 11th. It was live in the ballroom. We all enjoyed the good company, latkes, music, and dancing. It was wonderful to celebrate in person.

BINGO is scheduled for January 22, 2022. Right now it is scheduled live. But we have to see how everything progresses. We are also working on a crafts night and ping pong. The Social Club Shabbat will take place on Friday evening, May 20th. Please let us know if you have any additional suggestions.

Please keep MJC alive by supporting as many activities as you can. Check your email and the Message for further information. Phone trees will also go out every week. Watch for flyers.
